Man says he saw police beat suspect in city jail

A Montrose area man arrested for allegedly interfering with police said he saw a man beaten by officers in the city jail early Monday.

Ray Hill, 41, of the 300 block of Avondale, who helped found the Gay Political Caucus, said he was arrested about 8:30 p.m. Sunday in the 300 block of Avondale on the municipal court charge when he refused to leave the scene of an arrest as officers had requested.

He said he was placed in the jail's drunk tank about 12:30 a.m. and later saw an officer grab a large Latin American man and wrestle him to the ground when the man argued he could not be put in jail since he had done nothing wrong.

When the scuffle started, "six or seven" police gathered around the suspect, one officer kicking the man in the groin and another kicking him in the face, Hill said. He said the man was carried away after the attack.

Hill also said police used abusive language with inmates, calling blacks "niggers" and Latin Americans "wetbacks."

He said they also called homosexuals "something you couldn't print."

Assistant Police Chief John Bales said he knew of no complaint that had been filed in the incident and that he could not comment even if a complaint had been lodged.

Jail division Sgt. D.M. Cook also had not heard of the alleged attack and commented if something that serious had occurred, he would have known.
